See if your team knows it all in Patch's new trivia game

BELOIT, Wis.—The best part about Patch Products' new party game, Know It or Blow It™, is that one person doesn't have to know everything. Instead, teammates work together to complete trivia questions.

Know It or Blow It tests teams' knowledge of general information and fun facts like the 3 singing chipmunks, the 5 Great Lakes and Santa's 8 reindeer.

For each round, a team captain picks the order that teammates will respond.

If you know an answer, great! However, if you're not absolutely, positively sure, you can stop rather than risk your team's points. But if you answer incorrectly and blow it, your team loses its points for the round.

Throughout the game, players will notice 3 levels on the playing board. These levels indicate how many correct answers there are to the question. For example, if a player lands on an orange space, they will be asked to answer a question with 3 or 4 answers such as, "What are the 3 primary colors?" Answer: (blue, red and yellow). When players land on a blue space the question will have 5 or 6 answers such as, "Who are the 6 Peanuts boys?" Answer: (Charlie Brown, Linus, Pigpen, Schroeder, Franklin and Rerun). And the purple space 7 or more answers.

Know it or Blow it contains 300 question cards, involving a variety of different topics. The questions vary from hard to easy and from well-known to complex, so the game has something for everyone! Know it or Blow it is for 4 or more players in teams, ages 10 to adult.
